Islamic Food and Nutrition Council
of America

To authenticate any food or supplement for the same is an authority called Islamic Food and Nutrition Council of America, more popularly known as IFANCA. Symbolized by a 'crescent' and 'M', it certifies that any product carrying this symbol is "HALAL" after it has been critically evaluated by auditors and technologists from IFANCA.

This applies to not only the active ingredients in a formulation, but to excipients, fillers, emulsifiers and any other ingredients used in a formulation. A HALAL certification from IFANCA includes the verification and approval process in terms of the final product, raw material sources and clean packaging and processing. The procedure followed for certification at IFANCA is continually refined as new techniques and new ingredients are developed, and it is consistent with HACCP, ISO and other quality and safety standards.

The IFANCA HALAL certificate is accepted around the world and their staff is well trained ensuring broad based knowledge of proper methods of handling and production. In the present day scenario where knowledge and awareness is high among consumers, it is the ethical responsibility of nutraceutical manufacturers to provide them with proof of their quality and one simple yet effective way is the IFANCA HALAL certification.

The Founder & Group Chairman, Dr. Muhammed Majeed, being a true Muslim, validates and endorses IFANCA's Halal.
